CITY ADMINISTRATOR REPORT

March 13, 2025

1. The Health Care Committee will be meeting on Monday, March 31, at 4p for the first meeting to discuss employee health insurance and expectations for 2025-26. Rates won't be available until April and we'll see if we are close to expected increases around 10-12%.
2. I will be out of the office on Thursday, March 20 and back in on Friday.
3. We begin discussions with Lakenan on Wednesday, March 26 on our property/casualty insurance.
4. We have been held up on our sidewalk project on St. Mary's Lane due to a conflict with the National Park Service and MoDOT. The NPS did not sign off on the improvement in front of their property due to the significant appearance change they felt a concrete sidewalk with a 6 inch curb face would impact the historic buildings. After discussions in November and no direction during the winter we are submitting a concrete sidewalk with a 1 ½ inch curb face and exposed aggregate and reducing it to 5 feet wide. This will now impact our Prop S paving project because we will have to look at stormwater inlets in the street instead of curb inlets and those street inlets will be in the street. New sketch drawings are being developed for submittal to MoDOT and all other agencies.
5. More incidents with our postcard water bills in January and February. We are going to have to move to 8 ½ by 11 paper bills or we'll continue to have issues with the USPS distribution center in Hazelwood. FrontDesk is our online option for email bills but customers still opt to receive a paper bill so we are not saving much money on postage.

A rebrand for Ste. Geneviève focuses on the future, while keeping an eye on its past

The goal is to help more history buffs, architecture and design enthusiasts, and tourists of all types discover the French Colonial town nestled in the midwestern United States.

The attic of the Guilboud-Vallé House – the most well-preserved example of a Norman truss that can be seen in the United States. This home is the first stop on the Living in Ste. Geneviève House Tour.

As the oldest permanent European settlement west of the Mississippi River, Ste. Geneviève is home to the country's largest collection of vertical log structures, a style of French colonial architecture that has virtually vanished elsewhere in the United States.

When French Canadians settled into the area in 1735, these early inhabitants brought with them a building technique that uses “vertical wooden post” construction, with posts either set in the ground (poteaux en terre) or set on a foundation known as a sill (poteaux sur solle).

“I think Ste. Gen has been known by a lot of people as the oldest settlement in Missouri, and we have that recognition, but I still think we are relatively unknown,” says Mayor Brian Keim.

The Old Academy is the oldest known school building west of the Appalachian mountains. Now a private residence, it will appear on the Living in Ste. Geneviève House Tour.

The provenance of many of the town's historic buildings is surprising to those outside the area, adds tourism marketing director Aaron Smith. His colleagues in the tourism industry, though, have likened the city to a rural Quebecois village that's been dropped into the middle of Missouri. "That's something I don't think I've heard from anyone who's local here," he says.

Hired in December 2023, Smith wants to bring more attention to the city with a long-term marketing plan. No longer content to maintain the city's status as a hidden gem an hour-and-a-half drive from St. Louis, Smith says the goal is to attract history buffs, architecture and design enthusiasts, and tourists of all types, including those who may have grown up in the area, to the French Colonial town nestled in the midwestern United States.

"There are these people who grew up here saying, 'Well, we went to these historic homes back in third grade and they weren't that interesting.' So there is this disconnect that we need to find a bridge for and I think this rebranding exercise is exactly what we need,” says Smith.

The Marie Laporte House (c. 1790) is now Ms. Bette's Place, a bed and breakfast right in the heart of the historic district.

While the city's tourism efforts are built on the foundation of its historic structures, the new brand and marketing plan is also meant to sell the area as a multi-day destination that encompasses the area's other draws, including its wineries, hiking trails in surrounding Hawn State State Park, and special events that play to the city's proud French heritage. There is also a large waterpark.

“I think there's a real opportunity to be a national and international destination,” Smith says.

The Ste. Geneviève French Heritage Festival is held annually.

Last month, city officials unveiled a fresh logo and marketing materials. A new slogan—There's something special here—was also revealed. St. Louis-based branding firm Blacktop Sailor developed the brand kit, but the slogan bubbled up organically during a conversation with Ste. Geneviève-native Bill Naeger, a founder of the town's French Heritage Festival and co-author of the book, Ste. Geneviève: A Leisurely Stroll Through History. Naeger used the phrase at an informal meeting with the team from Blacktop Sailor, says Smith.

“There’s a lot of science behind why we chose it, so I don’t want to undersell it, but it was great that one of the most influential people in town was able to kind of come up with the slogan,” he says. “We all looked at each other after he said it and thought, That’s pretty damn good. So that was a special moment and that’s just Ste. Gen in a nutshell. These magical moments happen all the time.”

Ste. Geneviève's new branding

The new marketing materials include a fresh color palette and font styles inspired by the town's history and architecture, says Matthew Maddox, co-founder of Blacktop Sailor. Design details were influenced by the tile cladding the steeple at Ste. Geneviève Catholic Church, as well as the coats of arms belonging to some of the area's oldest families, including the Valle and the Gabourie. The new logo's textural pattern was inspired by a glass church lantern that Maddox later discovered shares a name with the city.

"It was just really interesting how Ste. Geneviève itself inspired designs that found their way into consideration," says Maddox. "It's been our job to use history to inform the aesthetic of the present, while also designing something that doesn't have an expiration date."

While the rebrand pays homage to the past, Ste. Genevieve is very much a living city, with many residents making homes in historic buildings, says Susie Johnson, of the Foundation for Restoration of Ste. Geneviève, which will host the annual "Living in Ste. Genevieve House Tour" on March 15.

"One of the reasons the Foundation started our house tours three years ago is to show a broad spectrum of architecture throughout town and how older homes can be refashioned to live in today,” says Johnson, a native of the city who moved away for a decade before returning to the area in 2012.

This year’s tour features a vertical log house and a vertical log cabin, while also showcasing a two-story horizontal log cabin, a Sears kit house, a Georgian Irish manor, a Queen Anne style house, and an American Foursquare, among others. Johnson lives in a circa 1845 Georgian-style brick home that reflects the influence of American and German settlers on the once predominantly French community.

“With two front doors, it was likely a combination of a residence and business,” says Johnson of the house she shares with her husband and three dogs. In the late 1800s, it was the home of the Creole Carrot Cigar and Tobacco Company. A mid-20th century kitchen and dining room addition make the home livable,” she says.

Home to some 4,400 residents, Ste. Geneviève balances preservation with evolution, says creative director and interior designer Jennifer Baca, who moved her business ventures from St. Louis to Ste. Gen, in part, because of its focus on “slow, intentional living and learning.”

Ste. Geneviève Catholic Church

Jenny B's former workspace, circa 1800s, in Ste. Genevieve.

"I'm a Francophile, a bohemian of sorts, attracted to the combination of yesteryear and modern times," says Baca, who operates under the name Jenny

B. “I began my journey by visiting the events throughout the year and touring the museums and houses portraying French living in the 1800s, including herb gardens. My weekly adventure included thrifting my way through the antique mall, sourcing home goods for myself and clients.”

Today Baca, who runs Le Comptoir General & Co., a kitchen and garden atelier, is part of a local design committee dedicated to bringing an artisanal touch to the town’s events. The committee is focused on being more purposeful about everything, from lighting to foraged tablescapes, in a way that helps share the unique story of a place, she says.

“People want to take the time to tell you their story. And people take the time to listen to my stories. I’ve shared endless conversations with both locals and visitors,” says Baca. “For me, the storytelling makes it special.”

A motion by Alderman Raney, second by Alderman Donovan to proceed with the second and final reading of Bill No. 4660. Motion carried 7-0-1 with Alderman Steiger voting no. Alderman Steiger asked David Bova to explain the fee structure calculation. David Bova explained that International Code Compliance has a report they issue every 3 to 4 months that calculates the price of square footage on average across the United States to build a house or a certain type of structure. The new permit fee will use that square footage price times the square footage of the proposed building times a permit fee multiplier that reflects the cost of the building department to issue a permit and perform inspections. The City has not increased their fees for almost 20 years. The proposed fees are factored in with the cost that the building department spends to process a complete building permit. City Attorney Bishop reiterated that the rate for the fees is based upon the calculation with the expenses associated with the City's permitting process and cost of regulations. (the percent factor) This is not directly to raise revenue but it is to assess the costs that are associated with the entire permitting process. A motion by Alderman Prince, second by Alderman Eydmann, Bill No. 4660 was placed on its second and final reading, read by title only, considered, and passed by a roll call vote as follows: Ayes: Alderman Eric Bennett, Alderman Joe Steiger, Alderman Mike Raney, Alderman Parick Fahey, Alderwoman Amie Dobbs, Alderman Joe Prince and Alderman Jeff Eydmann.
